

HOLIDAZE

The Cut Staff's Very Personal Beauty Gift Guide

By Ashley Weatherford and Kathleen Hou

VIEW SLIDESHOW

Photo: Zhe Zhu

Every good gift-giver knows that the best presents are personal. Which is why most gift guides are kind of a crap shoot: How can you expect to learn anything useful from an impersonal listicle? Because we recognize that all of us are buying gifts conforming to very specific parameters — like trying to find a moisturizer for your mom that doesn't smell floral (harder than you might think) — the Cut has devised this highly specific gift guide based on members of our staff. We hope that reading through archetypes like "Your Friend Who Has a Sex Podcast" and "Your Friend Who Is an Unfussy Human" will help you to make your own very personal gifting decisions this season, whether they be presents for others or for yourself.

BEAUTY GIFT GUIDE, 2015

For Your Friend Who Ain't Got Time For That

Rebecca Ramsey secretly knows the lyrics to practically every '80s gangster rap song and she doesn't have time for fussy beauty, especially in her new role as the Cut's style director. This fancy hairbrush will keep her hair even smoother (while doubling as a handy air microphone). A fragrance that recalls the feeling of being under a big open sky and a fragrant farm-to-bottle lavender body oil will also remind her of the happy tears from her recent outdoor wedding when she's running around the mean streets of Manhattan.

Tammy Fender Lavender Body Oil: $65 at Dermstore; Aerin Hair Brush: $85 at Net-a-Porter; Roads Big Sky Scent: $155 at Roads.com